She first met Watson while abroad. He was a pupil in a school she at-tended. The girl was the idol of her parents. They spent thousands of dol-lars on her musical talents and her going away has driven the mother almost to desperation.

"I decided last night," said Mrs. Hutter to-day, "to end my life, but I now feel that I should first find and rescue my poor girl from this man's infatuation as follows: "We first met Mr. Watson in Leipsig, and he charmed us all. Barbara, who had always been a simple, sweet-mind ed girl, seemed not to be attracted by him at first, but he soon had us all so that we obeyed his every suggestion. He had me under a spell, I firmly be lieve, and it required a strong effort for me to break away.

"He returned home before us. But he began his visits soon after our arrival. His influence over Barbara soor became complete. We could not reason with her. She would not listen.

"Watson's control over Barbara b came so complete that Mr. Hutter and I both felt that something had to be done. We forbade his calling, but that made no difference. He and his friend, Mr. Manser, with whom he roomed, frequently vistted our apartments and would take Barbara away under our very eyes. She obeyed Watson implicitly. She would leave the dinner table at night if he called her.

"She seemed to be under a hypnotic spell. She remained out until late at night and would offer us no excuses when we asked for them.

"She finally went away yesterday. She had been out, all the afternoon. About 4 o'clock she came in and I felt that she must have been under the influence of some powerful drug.

"It am married,' she said, 'I had to marry him.'

"Where is your ring?' I asked.

"She showed a diamond ring she had worn for years and answered, 'Here it is.'

"Who married you? What is the minister's name?' I continued.

"She then confessed that she was not married, but said they were to be married last night.

"While I was in an adjoining room she packed some clothes in a hand bag and went away. A neighbor saw her hurry down the street.

"Barbara studied under Prof. Bartlett at One Hundred and Eleventh street and Morningside Park. He knows of all our trouble, and has promised to help us trace her."

Mrs. Hutter will tell a magistrate her story to-day and try to ascertain her daughter's whereabouts.

Mr. Watson, according to Barbara's mother, is a spiritualist and possessed of strong mediumistic powers.

In May the National Association of Clothing Manufacturers met in Philadelphia and decided to post the open shop signs in the workrooms of all the membirs. Mr. Josephi saw to the placing of the signs and as soon as they were up the dis-sensions began. A demand that they be taken down was ignored. Last week be taken down was ignored.
